My name is Noah Giraldo, and I am currently an apprentice in software development. It is a pleasure to contact you through this email, expressing my respect for your organization and the work you do, as well as my interest in communicating in a formal way as part of my learning process.

I am writing this email as a formal job application solicitud for the position of Apprentice Software Developer in your organization. I am currently in training as a software development apprentice, and I am highly motivated to continue strengthening my technical and professional skills in a company that values learning, collaboration and quality in its projects.

Throughout my training process, I have acquired basic knowledge in programming, databases and version control, as well as experience working on academic projects where I have learned to analyze requirements, propose solutions and work in a team to meet objectives and deadlines. I consider myself a responsible, committed and adaptable person, with good communication skills and a strong desire to keep learning from more experienced professionals.

I would be honored to bring my enthusiasm, my willingness to learn and my growing technical abilities to your company, always respecting institutional policies, professional ethics and the guidelines for digital communication and netiquette.
